GOTHAM CHINESE.

Their Singular Superstitions and Patalism.

The Reasons Which Make the Chinaman, Naturally a Coward, Meet Death with Stoigism - Chinese Hospitals.

[N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.]

Boon after the first batch of Chinese put in their appearance in New York they began to surround themselves with heathen accessories to which they had been accustomed in San Francisco. Before three months had gone they had several flourishing opium dens, half a dozen "fan-ton" games and lottery joints and a dozen stores for the sale of Oriental commodities. Having provided for the amusements of their daily lives the moon-eyed strangers set up relations with the powers above, by establishing a Joss house, wherein they hang their prayers with commendable regularity and punctuality. Next they set about encompassing order by the founding of a Chinese law court, and lastly and very recently they completed the social circle of Chinese life by opening a hospital, o more properly a house wherein the sick may die without bothering their friends and rela-

Chinamen are well known to be fatalists. This trait in their National character makes Chinamen, who are otherwise cowardly, meet death with the utraost stocism. On the Pacific slope executions of Chinamen have been by no means unfrequent, and in no case has the victim of the law failed to march to the scaffold with the fortitude of an Indian. The belief that what is to be will be, and no act of a person may avert a catastrophe, renders the healing art most difficult of application to Chinamen. Once John becomes really sick, he is pretty sure to die, because he gives up all hope, refuses to take medicine, and resigns himself stoically to the fate in store for him. He is superstitious, and places what little faith he has in curatives, not in drugs, but in queer amulets, funny bugs and nauseating liquids blessed by the priest. This superstition affects his relations, and once the hand of death is considered to have set its mark upon the sick man's saffron forehead he is an outcast. He is carrion and no more fit to remain in human habitation; for should be die under the roof, all manner of ills will fall upon the inmates. Therefore he is hustled out to die.

In San Francisco, dying men are often found upon the streets. Parents are as ruthlessly sacrificed, once their ailment is considered hopeless, as the veriest stranger-and yet the children of a Chinaman are the most dutiful of any children of any Hearing that a hospital, or sick-house, as the Chinese term it, had been established New Steam Dye Works. in Chinatown, a representative of the Commercial Advertiser set to work to find the place, and explore it if opportunity offered. From inquiries made among the white people in the neighborhood, the house was located on the north side of the street, five or six doors from the corner of Chatham street. The entrance was under a stoop, and opened into a long, dark hallway, that in turn led into a blind court between the front and rear buildings. The drains from the adjoining houses emptied into the stone-flagged court, and the sewage lay in little pools in the broken stones, sending up an overpowering stench. Garbage was scattered over the ground, where it had been thrown from the windows, and lumber, boxes and barrels filled up the intervesing spaces. Picking his way across the sourt, the writer reached a deal door that appeared to open into the rear house, but which really opened into a long alley, at the end of which was another door on which was pasted a red sign in black Chinese characters. Knocking produced no response. The visitor lifted the latch and pushed the door open. A volume of foul air and smoke poured out, nearly stifling the reporter, who drew back for a moment, but recovering he entered. The place was dark, but gradually the eye becoming accustomed to the gloom it was possible to distinguish the limits of the place. Not a stick of furniture was in the place, but a brazier made of an old coal oil can burned in the middle of the room. On one side were three bunks, arranged end for end, and on one, covered by a quilt made of gunny sacks and rags, lay a human form. As the visitor approached the miserable creature half raised upon his elbow and asked in a hollow voice: "What for?"

"You sick?" interrogated the reporter. "Me belly sick," answered the Chinaman, falling back with a groan. "Hungry?"

"No-no can eat." "Where are your friends?"

"No got fliends. All gone." As the poor fellow ceased, a hollow cough told the story. He was dying from consumption which carries off fully half his race in this country. Poor food, insufficient clothing and an unsanitary mode of life soon works havoe with the weak physique of the coolie, and his vicious habits of opium smoking and gambling hurry him on until too weak to stand, his friends carry him to the sick house.

There was nothing more to learn. John was dying, and he would do nothing to help himself, for was not the hand of death upon him? So, leaving a small piece of silver in the talon-like hand of the sick man, the reporter left. As he stopped into the court the proprietor of the sick house was coming in with a tin plate of rice and a diminutive cracked cup of tea. "What is the matter with that man, John!" asked the reporter.

"Oh, him die."

"The bad sickness?" (consumption.) "Yes. Him die to-mollow."

"Where are his friends?" "Him fliends plenty lich. Got 'em store Payce Sam Kee plenty money keep Ah

"Why don't you get a doctor?" "Wha' for. Him die. Wha' for spendum money doctor?"

"Why don't his friends keep him home where he can be comfortable?" " All same had does come, he die there.

The next day when the reporter called Ah Jim lay in a pine box. He had on a now mit of thes glassed mostle, and a shallway with a bright and instant the face were a calm expression, and the this hands were a calm expression, and the this hands were present ever his broad. France post burned, and little glided popular norm unexplast were scattered around. Across the abread grand properations were making for a great funeral least, for Ah Jim had deal out of the house and he sould now in

We have used Van's Magic Oil for internal and external applications, in cases of Colds, Colic, Cuts, Burns, Brusses, etc., and find none better. It is especially adapted to children, as it can be used with safety and estisfaction, and we carnestly recommend it to parents.

Muskeppa, Sept. 20, 1884.

J. W. EDDY.

I have used Van's Magic Oil for Neuralgia, and it has proved to be satisfactory, as it has cuted me entirely; also our next door neighbor was cured by it. Joshans Kiaft, by Internal use for Sore Throat, combined with a severe Cough and Hoarseness; also a man by the name of Staffal Kwintens was cured by it of a very severe Lame back. I can never say too much in praise of your Magic Oil.

Orang Haven April 2, 1881

Yours truly, JACOB DESPELDER.

We have used your Magic Oil for several years, and would not like to be without it, as it is a good family medicine, viz: Burns, Bruises. Sore Throat, Colds, etc., hence I truly recommend it to the public.

REV. E. VANDERVRIES.

Patterson, N. J., Feb. II, 1884.

Muskegon, Mich.

Mr. N. G. Vanderlinde:—We have used your Magic Oil with great satisfaction. One of our children was taken sick with (so-called) diplatheria. Of course we employed a doctor, but the child grew worse every day. One morning, the doctor called with four more of his profession; and consulted. If the child would be alive in the evening they were to open the child's throat and cut the phiegm out. This I did not approve of, but as there was no hope of the child's recovery. I consented. Finally our neighbor, Mrs. F. Vanderwerp, called with a bottle of your Magic Oil, and asked if we would use it—it would cost us nothing. We gave the child three or five drops internally every hour, and poulticed the soice of its feet with onion and bathed its throat well with Magic Oil, and when the doctor came in the evening he wanted to know what we had given the child, as it breathed so much easier. I told him we used Van's Magic Oil. He said keep right on using it as that was better than he could do. I have thanked Mrs. Vanderwerp a thousand times for her kindness, and I sincerely thank you for your valuable medicine. Yours truly.

MRs. A. D. PAIN.

Muskegon.—I would say, I have known the effects of Van's Magic Oil, in domestic practice, always with good effects, never with bad effects. Have prescribed it in my practice; find it a very good and eafe medicine. W. H. DELAP, M. D.
